

Ten Steps To Leaving Your Legacy

To help you consider how to leave your legacy, follow these ten steps:

1. Prepare a will. Only 20-40% of those who pass away have one. Without a will, you lose control over your property at death.
2. Evaluate your financial situation and decide what your charitable goals are.
3. Consult an attorney, accountant, or financial advisor about tax-friendly options for making a legacy gift.
4. Choose one or more organizations that have made a difference in your life to leave a gift to in your will.
5. Learn more about the organizations that support LEAVE A LEGACY® New Hampshire/Vermont.
6. Contact the organization(s) of your choice to learn about opportunities for legacy giving.
7. Leave a specific dollar amount or a percentage of the assets in your will to a charity of your choice.
8. Name a charity as the beneficiary of your pension or a life insurance policy.
9. Consider using non-cash assets for your legacy gift.
10. Encourage family and friends to leave gifts to charities in their wills.

Everyone has the capacity to leave a legacy.

*Make a difference

Several years ago, The Howe Library in Hanover received a bequest of $2,000 from a long time cardholder. That bequest was used to establish the "1000 Books Reading Program" for preschoolers; 100 canvas bags each holding 10 books especially chosen for young readers and their parents by the youth librarian. The theory behind the program is that reading 1000 books to a child is a way to develop the joy of reading and to prepare a child for school. Who would have guessed that a remembrance in a long-time friend's will would have such long term benefit to the next generation?

Girl Scout Council of VT

Elizabeth "Lib" Higgins became a scout when she was a girl, and never left the Girl Scout organization! Lib volunteered her time, even though her 3 children were boys. She became a staff member, then when she retired, Lib returned to Girl Scouts again as a volunteer. Lib understood that when girls become members, they benefit from all that Girl Scouts has to offer. After 71 years in Girl Scouts, Lib left a legacy gift that provides membership scholarships for more girls to join the Girl Scouts.

Marguerite Wellborn:

Honoring a Donor's Vision

New Hampshire Charitable Foundation Written By Lois Shea

Marguerite Wellborn was by avocation a naturalist and a writer. She spent thousands of hours studying ecology, and wrote tens of thousands of words of scientific prose and lyrical poetry about things like the construction of spider webs, the complicated lives of ants, the imbalance of a northern forest without indigenous wolves, and global warming. In her will were 70 final words on the subject, which called for the creation of the Wellborn Ecology Fund. Wellborn left nearly $10 million to the Upper Valley Region of the New Hampshire Charitable Foundation to create the Fund, intended "...for public awareness of environmental and ecological issues in the Upper Valley..."

To date, about 95 grants have been made totaling about $2 million. As a result, third graders are learning tracking and wildlife inventorying skills, a group of seventh and eighth graders use global positioning system technology to map their town forest, teachers use the "Forest for Every Classroom" program to weave the natural world throughout school curricula, and landowners learn how to identify and protect rare plant species and promote biological diversity.

The list goes on. Thousands of people in hundreds of communities in New Hampshire and Vermont have gained a greater understanding of the natural world all because Marguerite Wellborn believed fervently that human knowledge of the environment was the key to its preservation.

"I think she'd probably be amazed, really, at how efficiently... her simple bequest has been organized into something real and effective," said Sally Wellborn, Marguerite's daughter who lives in Cornish.

LEAVE A LEGACY® is a nation-wide public awareness campaign that promotes the message that all people can make a difference by leaving a charitable legacy through a will, trust or by other means. LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT is a partnership of charitable organizations, professional advisors, and corporations. It is sponsored by Upper Valley Planned Giving Council and is supported by several area organizations. This is our 4th publication of the LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT magazine.

The goal of LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT is to increase the number of charitable gifts and bequests that we make throughout New Hampshire and Vermont. We have dedicated October as LEAVE A LEGACY® month. This is a perfect time to take action. Whether it is time for you to write your will, or add a charitable bequest to your existing will, name a charity as a beneficiary of your retirement plan or insurance policy, it's easy to do. Your advisors and our public presentations will help explain how; and you'll enjoy the lasting satisfaction of knowing that you've done something special for the future of New Hampshire and Vermont citizens.

Thanks to our sponsors and all of our supporting partners and partners, and volunteers for their efforts in bringing LEAVE A LEGACY® to New Hampshire and Vermont. We welcome inquiries and support during the coming months and years as together we make a difference in our communities.

Estate Planning: Finding a Place for Charity

By Mark E. Melendy,
Law Offices of Mark E. Melendy, PLLC and Deborah Hall, Planned Giving Committee Chairman, The Ausbon Sargent Land
Preservation Trust

Controlling what happens to one's property at death is important to every person, no matter the size of the estate, and taking steps to create a will or trust is a big part of taking control. If a person dies without a will or estate plan, but owning assets in his or her individual name, the likely result is that those assets will be distributed according to the state's intestacy laws, and those laws probably do not reflect the person's wishes. By contacting your attorney and creating or updating your will, you can do what is right for your beneficiaries and can also perpetuate your charitable interests by including desired charitable gifts.

If you wish to make a charitable gift, consider talking to the benefited charity about your plans before your will or estate plan is final. Many people who make a planned gift - be it a bequest or life-income arrangement - fail to discuss it with the charity. Often the reason is a reluctance to discuss one's personal financial affairs with anyone other than one's accountant or lawyer. However, significant benefits can arise from including the charity in the discussion.

First, through discussions with the charity's development officer, you and your advisors can tailor a planned gift that meets the charity's future needs and addresses your desires to benefit the charity. This will ensure that your philanthropy has the effect you want.

Second, knowing your plans allows the charity to involve you in the charity's activities during your lifetime and keep you abreast of current programs of the charity, including how the charity is addressing issues of particular interest to you.

Third, the benefited charity will want to acknowledge your special charitable contribution. Charities often go to great lengths to thank donors and publicize gifts to annual and capital campaigns. However, planned gifts are promised gifts that often will not pass to the charity until after the donor's death. Unless the charity knows about your planned gift, it cannot appropriately thank you. Yet such gifts should be recognized, as they represent generous forethought on your part and often have a profound impact on the charity.

Many charities have established bequest recognition societies to acknowledge and thank donors today for their planned gifts. These bequest society members are often listed in annual reports, invited to special recognition events, and sent correspondence from the charity to keep them up to date.

Creating a personal charitable legacy is a deliberate process that is enhanced by involving the charity in the planning stages. It can help ensure that your planned gift is what you want and affords the charity the opportunity to recognize you today for your future generosity.

By Nancy Chiquoine, Executive Director

“Giving liberates the soul of the giver.”

- Maya Angelou

Although a woman still earns 77 cents for each dollar a man earns, women's financial power is growing. You might be surprised to know that...

- Women currently control $14 trillion in assets - nearly 60% of the wealth in this country, and predictions are that the assets they control will increase by 57% in the next 10 years.
- In 2005, 43% of the top wealth holders in North America were women.
- Nearly half of all privately-held businesses are women-owned and employ 19.1 million people
- Because women live longer than men, they frequently end up in charge of many of the trillions of dollars now passing from generation to generation.

Although women have historically given less to charities than men during their lifetimes, this is changing: the giving rates of both time and money for women and men business owners is virtually the same. A generation of women - those who started careers in the 1970s - are more financially independent than any previous generation. This translates to more short and long-term philanthropy by women.

The 2004 “Slate 60” (a listing of the 60 largest charitable contributions of the year) contains 11 single women and 24 coupled women; 58% of this list includes women as named philanthropists! We can expect this trend to continue as female baby boomers, now in their prime giving years, are predicted to be the most active group of women philanthropists to date.

Women are making more financial decisions and have a greater pool of resources to spend than ever before. The profile of a woman philanthropist? She's someone who makes her own giving decisions, is involved and has first-hand knowledge of the organization she's supporting and is convinced of its efficiency and believes deeply in its mission.

The LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT effort would not have been possible without the generous gift of time, talent and services by the following individuals and organizations:

Bob Hagen, Graphic Designer, Hanover, NH, for his tireless efforts and contribution of his creative talents in designing this magazine.
Dartmouth Printing, Hanover, NH, for its excellent printing job and its generous contributions toward the project helping to reduce expenses so the LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT Magazine can be affordable for everyone.

Some of the stories contained in this magazine have been modified by LEAVE A LEGACY® NH/VT due to space limitations. The intent was to maintain the substance of the story with fewer words; it was not to change the tone of the story.
